Respite Relief for Military and Veteran Caregivers

What is Respite?

Respite gives you a break. It gives you an opportunity to focus on yourself. If you are caring for a spouse, parent, child, friend, or another loved one, then respite relief is for you.

I was skeptical that using respite care would actually help - I thought it might be more work than it was worth. But it was a game-changing. It really was the first step for me to start taking better care of myself mentally and physically.

How Do I Prepare My Loved One For Respite?

Respite provides a much-needed break for both the caregiver and the care receiver. Some Veterans, however, may be hesitant because they are uncomfortable in an unfamiliar environment or being with people who are considered "strangers." Allowing someone new to help them may be outside of their comfort zone, and yours.

Check out our helpful 9 Steps to Respite Care guide to help prepare you and your loved one for receiving respite. Respite is a crucial service for you and there are ways to maximize your experience.

Helpful Resources to Find the Respite Option that Works Best for You:

ARCH National Respite Network and Resource Center

- ARCH can help you find a respite provider in your community through your State Respite Coalition or Lifespan Respite Program. ARCH also maintains the National Respite Locator Service (NRLS), which helps parents, family caregivers, and professionals find respite services in their state and local area to match their specific needs. The NRLS lists primarily home care agencies, assisted living, or state or community-based agencies that provide respite care.

Code of Support Foundation

- While there are tens of thousands of resources available to those who serve and have served, there are barriers to finding the right resource, knowing if you qualify, and navigating the application process. COSF helps veterans, caregivers, and family members find and navigate these critical services through their PATRIOTlink and Case Management programs. They provide one-on-one support, education, and outreach connecting civilians, members of the military, and veterans.
